The non-scatological language of Barracuda is filled with watery metaphors: "drowning", "floating" and "freestyle", among other words, have both swimming and non-swimming meanings. And, after The...

Barracuda by Christos Tsiolkas - review | Books | The Guardian

"[Tsiolkas is] a master chronicler of the zeitgeist... There is no understatement; no silences nor lilting musicality. The words hurtle out as he depicts characters trapped between irreconcilable worlds – middle class and working class, Anglo and Greek, gay and straight, physical and intellectual."
