Narrative Means to Therapeutic Ends. White and Epston base their therapy on the assumption that people experience problems when the stories of their lives, as they or others have invented them, do not sufficiently represent their lived experience. Therapy then becomes a process of storying or restoring the lives and experiences of these people. In this way narrative comes to play a central role in therapy.

Narrative therapy draws upon the work of Jacques Derrida and Michel Foucault to question singular truth claims about human experience. While Derrida takes us beyond what is blatant to latent readings of an expressed word or phrase, Foucault destabilizes knowledge by situating taken-for-granted practices of the self in the historical contexts from which they sprang.
