Front-end content strategists typically have a love for the content and the customer experience. They make recommendations about the content itself. When marketers say "content strategist," they typically mean front-end strategist. That makes sense because the front end - the customer experience - is where all business planning starts.

Why You Need Two Types of Content Strategist

"Most companies that have experienced digital success—Facebook, Amazon, Uber, Airbnb, and others—are not just creators of products, but connectors." Anand explores this phenomenon, and the tension between "content" versus "connections," in a new book The Content Trap: A Strategist's Guide to Digital Change.
